DEMAND HAS INCREASED FOR ARTS AND CRAFTS

For those of you who have vowed (again) to get an earlier start on next year's Christmas preparations, there are still a few openings in the Spring '72 arts and crafts classes at the Students' Union Building.

But only a few.

Some of the classes were filled within two days of the beginning of registration on December 6; others are rapidly approaching capacity.

"When SUB first opened in 1967, there were only about 30 people using the arts and crafts facilities each week," says MRS. JANET MOORE, Arts Supervisor. "Now there are 350 either taking classes or using the workshop."

In addition to offering classes in such things as ceramics, weaving, and block printing, the Students' Union also has an arrangement whereby students, their wives or husbands, and alumni may use the equipment in SUB for a fee of $4 for three months. Fees for the public are $10 for three months.

"Many people, having once acquired the necessary skills, could easily complete projects on their own if they had the equipment. But the equipment is so expensive that we try to make our facilities available to as many people as possible," says Mrs. Moore.

She says the equipment is both an asset—"We have four kilns and 13 pottery wheels for the ceramics classes, so we can handle a fair amount of work"—and a liability—"The kilns break down almost regularly and it costs about $500 per year for repairs."

Despite its erratic behavior, however, more equipment is needed. The problem is finding the money for it.

"We operate on a deficit budget of $6,000 per year, which is absorbed by the Students' Union. Initially, this program was never meant to make a profit or even to break even, but circumstances have changed. We have been asked to cut our deficit, and we're trying, but we do not want to raise the fees."

She points out that the winter and spring pottery sales bring in about $500 each year, but the profits from the sales don't do much to cancel the red entries in the ledger, caused in part by the high prices the Students' Union is forced to pay for its materials.

"We have to pay retail prices for everything because the arts and crafts program is considered recreational. We can't get an educational discount, even though many of our registrants are teachers who go back to the schools and teach their students what they've learned here."

Second only to equipment and supplies is expenditure on salaries for instructors, most of whom come from the University community or the city Parks and Recreation Department. There are usually 12 to 15 part-time instructors, and salaries start at $5 per hour.

"They are all specialists," says Mrs. Moore,

"and we couldn't get these good people if we didn't pay the going rate."

She mentions, as examples, the two weaving instructors, WHYNONA YATES and EILA SAARINEN.

"Whynona has been instrumental in getting our weaving program started, and she has brought the Canadian influence to the program. Eila contributes the Scandinavian influence. No one in the city offers a weaving program as extensive as ours. Eventually, we would like to be able to prepare our students for the Canadian Weavers' Guild examinations."

Registrations are still being accepted in one of the weaving classes, as well as in ceramics, painting, batik, block printing, copper enamelling, and fabric printing (silkscreen). All fees are due on or before January 7, 1972. For information and registration, contact Mrs. Moore, 302 SUB, 432-4547.

PROFESSOR TO JOIN CIDA PROJECT IN UGANDA

FRANK W. WOOD, Professor of Food Science at the University, will leave Edmonton February 1, 1972 to join a team of Canadians working for the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) in Uganda.

The project, for which Professor Wood has been seconded, involves expansion of the dairy industry in the east African country. The government of Uganda wishes to increase the supply of milk to its people, and the goal is self-sufficiency in milk supply in the shortest possible time.

To help meet this objective, dairy cattle have been imported from Canada and Europe. Canadian assistance will be in the technical areas of the handling and processing of milk.

Professor Wood, who has been on the staff here since 1946, will remain in Uganda until his retirement on June 30, 1973.

BOOKS

Brooks Cole Publishing has just released a textbook entitled Psychological Theories and Human Learning: Kongor's Report. Its author is GUY R. LEFRANCOIS, Associate Professor of Educational Psychology. The book has been written as a report presented to the Koron Space Exploration Department, Division of Behavioral Sciences, Planet Androneas, by its agent: Kongor M-111 216, 784,912.LVKX4. It is a summary of earth knowledge about human learning.

VISITORS

■ R. G. NUNGE, Associate Professor of Chemical Engineering, Clarkson College of Technology, presented a seminar to the Department of Chemical and Petroleum Engineering.

■ S. A. NAIMPALLY of Lakehead University gave a colloquium to the Department of Mathematics.

■ NED A. FLANDERS of the Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development, Berkeley, California, was a guest speaker at an informal seminar held in the Education Centre.

PARKING SPACE IS AVAILABLE

Parking spaces are still available, both with and without plug-ins, at various locations on campus. Interested persons should enquire either by telephone, 432-3811, or by calling at the Parking Office, Room 106, Printing Services Building.

THE J. B. TAYLOR MEMORIAL FUND

The death of Jack Taylor in September, 1970, meant a great loss to his many friends and acquaintances at the University as well as those in Western Canada at large. His colleagues in the Department of Art and Design and the Edmonton Art Gallery are combining to provide a fitting memorial for him. A committee has been formed to put together a comprehensive exhibition of his work to be shown first in Edmonton and then in other parts of Canada.

The Memorial Committee needs help in two ways. First, information is required concerning the whereabouts of paintings, sketches, and drawings done by Professor Taylor, so that his work can be recorded and catalogued. Second, financial assistance is needed in order to publish an illustrated catalogue of his work in connection with the exhibition. Any contribution whatsoever will help the committee to carry out this project. Contributions can be by cheque to the J. B. Taylor Memorial Fund or by cash (a receipt for income tax deductions will be provided), and remitted to the following members of the committee, all of them staff members of the Department of Art and Design: DAVID CANTINE, Room 202C South Lab, 432-4194; RONALD DAVEY, Room 306 Arts Building, 432-3261; ALLISON FORBES,

Room 346 Arts Building, 432-3458; DOUGLAS HAYNES, Room 202B South Lab, 432-4194; NORMAN YATES, Art Workshop III, 432-5866.

ADULT COUNSELLING SERVICE

The Adult Counselling Service was established to assist individuals in their vocational and educational concerns. Within the counselling relationship, the client is encouraged to explore all potential or existing areas of concern. The counsellor is CRAIG PARKER, a certified psychologist in the province of Alberta and a member of the staff of the Department of Extension.

An initial interview, without charge, serves the purpose of determining whether counselling and/or assessment can be useful to the client. If the counsellor and client mutually agree to proceed, the subsequent sessions may include the use of vocational and psychological tests. Appointments for an interview can be made by telephoning the Counselling Services at 439-2021. The service is available between 1:30 and 4 p.m. each weekday and on Wednesday evenings between 6 and 9 p.m.

The fee schedule is $40 for vocational-psychological testing and up to five sessions of counselling, or $10 per session of counselling. Clients who have difficulty meeting the established fee may discuss their circumstances with the counsellor and work out special arrangements.

VISITING LAW LECTURERS WANTED IN BRITAIN

The Faculty of Law of the University of Birmingham (or the Institute of Judicial Administration) is interested in receiving visiting lecturers for short periods of approximately one week or ten days, during which time they could lecture in English on topics of their choice, or assist in seminars in the general field of comparative law (or procedural law or droit judiciaire, in relation to the Institute).

The faculty could give limited financial assistance towards travel expenses or a small honorarium. Enquiries should be addressed to: Professor L. NEVILLE BROWN, Dean of the Faculty of Law, The University of Birmingham, Birmingham 15, England.

CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS

A limited number of courses will be offered this winter in the Management Development Program, one of seven certificate programs offered by the Department of Extension.

Lectures and discussions in the certificate programs are held during the evenings on campus. At present personnel from 429 Edmonton firms including governmental departments and agencies are enrolled in certificate programs in Computer Programming, Local Government Studies, Management Science, Personnel Administration, Public Administration, Real Estate, and Management Development.

To qualify for the Management Development Certificate, a candidate must successfully complete six courses. Of these six, the three compulsory courses provide the student with basic business skills and theory in the areas of business organization and administration, accounting, and economics. More specialized areas of study are presented in the optional courses, three of which are required. A candidate may choose courses in communications, commercial law, marketing, personnel administration, production management, purchasing, finance, policy, or commercial data processing.

All courses are 50 hours in length and require the candidate to write assignments and examinations. The fee is $100 per course and includes textbooks and materials.

Management Development courses to be offered this winter are Canadian Economic Development (compulsory), Business Communications (optional), and Business Policy (optional).

Students may begin the program with any of these courses, although it is recommended that Business Policy be taken as a senior course.

Detailed information about any of these certificate programs is available through the Department of Extension at 439-2021.
